MAD STARS OF THE STAGE

Enactment of a Drama at an Insane Asylum.

ALL THE ACTORS CRAZY

Inmates of the Mattenwan Home for Lunatics Produce a Thrilling Play of the War-Some of Their Flights of Fancy Put Sane Thespians in the Shade.

Matteawan, N. Y., Oct. 27,-While the wind howled about the Matteawan Asylum and the rain burst upon it in mighty sheets last night the crimnal insane of the State produced and listened to a thrilling war drama. The actors were insane, the author was insane, the audience was composed of 400 lunatics, guarded by a few keepers, yet it is but telling the truth to say that there are many actors in vaudeville in New York city and a few dramatic authors who could have learned much from tonight's perform-

While the terrible weather and the exciting nature of the play in hand seemed likely to exert an exciting invence upon the strange audience, there was no untoward incident to mar the performance The audience was most orderly, but caught the humor and patriotism of the drama with wonderful quickness.

The Distinguished Audience. The audience ontained many persons at whose deeds the State wondered and shuddered before they were shut up in Matteawan. Oilver Curtis Perry, the fa-mous train robber, entered the theater of the institution led by a comrade, for he still wears a bandage over his eyes, which ne destroyed. Behind him walked "Frenchy," the murderer of old Shake-speare. He smiled vaguely at the comedi-ans. Lizzle Halliday, the central figure in the grewsome tragedy of the Shawan-gunk Mountains, a triple murderess, watched the stage keenly. She wiped a tear when the fortunes of the hero were at a low ebb, and the frequently were for the author gave the villain no end of

Dr. Meyer, wife of the poisoner, was another first nighter, and an interested one. He was prodigal of his applause. George Appe, of green goods and Lexow com-mittee fame, sat beside his father, Quim-bo Appo, who has been four times found guilty of homicide. The young man often laughed heartily, but the face of old Quimbo betrayed no feelings, except that at times his deep set eyes glowed with new fire. This was when men struggled on the stage. Such action stirred old Appo, but not greatly

"Mickey Slines, the East Side boy, whose crime made a sensation in its day, was the livelest of those present. The vast majority of the patients enjoyed themselves as thoroughly and as decently as any audience which sat in a Broadway theater last night, although some of those present are recognized in the asylum as men too dangerous to be left for a mo ment unguarded.

The Play and Characters. The play, called by the author, Ernest

Bostwick, an original musical drama, was "For Love and War." Bostwick is not a convict, although he is a patient. The the man servant and detective act, was the life of the play. These men were really funny, and Fraser in particular subsistence, Capt. William B. Hale; sur-geon, Major Francis C. Ford.

The author as the hero, is secretary to a banker and loves the old man's daughter. The banker loses money through the James L. Wilson: chief commissary of subsistence, Major Robert L. First Brigade, Brig. Gen. Henry Tomaries the girl in a hurry, and, being accused of robbery and not being ripe. for vindication, burries away to fight the Spanish. The villain turns up before Santiago as a Spanish spy in an American uniform and gets possession of a military telegraph instrument long enough to get the hero suspected of treason and well nigh hanged. But Fellx O'Grady, who knows more in a minute than Foxy Quiller does in a week, exposes Linares as the Americans are returning victorious, and the hero is reinstated in time for the red fire and the patriotic chorus which closes Shafter and Wheeler made material fo ters where the windows are not barred, and here, as elsewhere the ters where the windows are not barred, and here, as elsewhere, the funny man remarked of Gen. Shafter that his word ought to carry some weight, adding, solto voce, 310 pounds. Of Roosevelt, Geoghegan, as the funny Irishwoman, said she wouldn't name her boy Teidy, as that would be an insult to a beast which wouldn't dodge anything, let alone taxwouldn't dodge anything, let alone taxes. These topical allusions were hailed with wild applause by the audience, who appeared thoroughly conversant with current topics.

Scenery Painted by a Convict.

The second act showed the Seventy-first in the trenches before Santiago. The scenery was painted by a convict, and was wonderfully well done. The usual songs and dances were introduced in the old way, and some of them were excel-lent. No one on the stage or in the audience showed the slightest symptom of mental disturbance, although some of those present were among the State's most famous criminals—men of whom one has heard nothing but blood an

Dr. Allison said some of the actors an many of the audience were much quiet-in the theater than in the wards. The lights and excitement occupied their attention. Indeed, permission to attend or participate in these entertainments is a sort of good conduct reward, which has proved most useful in some cases Bostwick, the author and hero, took himself and the piece more seriously than the rest. The others interpreted the fun and spirit of the play with surprising intelligence, and when a laugh due there was no delay on the pa

After the curtain fell and the music ceased the faces of the spectators changed in a minute. The light and anima-tion vanished slowly, and with a certain relapse into wearness and doggedness which was pathetic, they moved from the brief liberty of the playhouse back to the prison proper. Mentally and phys-ically they had been free for an hour, but when the lights died and the bugles were silent they saw the bars again and one read the change in every face

The highly organized, finely strung nervous system of women subjects them to terrors of nervous apprehenjects them to terrors of nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate.

Boston, Oct. 27 .- Mrs. Vest, formerly Miss Grace Barrons, the young woman who last June was placed under arrest at North Adams, on the charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud, has created another sensation.
